the coming months – for the sake of the company, employees and customers.

“We see the current step as an important opportunity to reposition CHRONEXT. As a debtor in possession, we can make the changes needed to futureproof the company. It is vital to us that our customers know that we are continuing at this time to do everything within our means to maintain their trust. In respect of our commission business, it is of utmost importance to us that customer property is handled separately during the proceedings. We firmly believe that the strategic decision to file for debtor-in-possession proceedings will lay the foundations for an even stronger and more customer-focused CHRONEXT brand,” said Ms Frederike Knop, managing director of CHRONEXT Service Germany GmbH.
